

“As a university dean, I look favorably on prospective university students, not just arts majors, who have taken arts courses in high school.

Arts courses help prepare the high school student with the critical thinking skills that will help them succeed in college and then ultimately in life.”

*Dean Jane Rhoades Hudak, Ph.D.
Georgia Southern University*

Georgia’s colleges and universities value prospective students who take a year or more of art courses in high school. Art is much more than just drawing. Art teaches skills rarely found in the typical classroom-- skills like observing, imagining, innovating through exploration, and reflective self-evaluation. In art, students learn to work cooperatively with others, present ideas, and construct multiple solutions to a given problem. Choose an art course this year. It’s preparation for college and preparation for life.
